

Training Content Library

Every week, a class full of new drivers arrives for orientation to complete paperwork, receive training, and learn about your company. This should be an exciting time flush with opportunity, but each week you sense the indifference in new drivers as they mentally prepare themselves for a long, tedious week of paperwork, outdated training videos, and downtime.

You're familiar with the research showing that people are more likely to stay with a company longer if they have a positive onboarding experience. You want to put a new lens on onboarding so it's viewed as an opportunity instead of a necessary burden.

What if there were an engaging, interactive way to train and test drivers over required topics before they ever came to orientation? The time drivers saved could be spent touring your facilities and meeting key employees, making important connections before hitting the road. Mobile orientation gets drivers on the road faster while still providing them the training they need to succeed.

A New Lens on Onboarding

Let's take a look at what an enhanced onboarding experience might look like for you and your drivers.

1

It's Monday and you have a new orientation class scheduled to arrive one week from today. You decide to schedule your forms, video trainings, and testing and send them to your drivers so they have ample time to complete these materials.

2

Mario, one of your new drivers, receives a notification on his phone asking him to complete onboarding tasks. When he takes his next break, he opens Driver Pulse and starts the paperwork he need to complete from his truck.

3

Driver Pulse makes onboarding easy for Mario. The app provides a checklist of each form, document, training, and test that his recruiter needs him to complete to onboard. It also holds other onboarding details that are important to him, such as Greyhound ticket information, the results of his drug test, any shared background reports, a historical record of any communications he's had with your company, and more.

4

You receive all the required paperwork and testing results and can easily track the progress and view analytics of Mario and your other drivers. If any drivers stall or need help, Driver Pulse's messaging lets you interact and engage with drivers as they need assistance.

5

Drivers join the team with a higher level of energy. They know what to expect, having all their documents, forms, training, and testing already behind them. You have meaningful conversations with each of them, introduce them to key personnel, give them a tour, and send them to take their road test before getting on the road. Orientation completes in record time and the experience makes a lasting impression on drivers.
